Although our fees are fixed the disbursements are charged by third parties and may from time to time increase or decrease and you will be notified.

The disbursements which we anticipate will apply are set out separately below. This list is not exhaustive and other disbursements may apply depending on whether the property is freehold or leasehold. In respect of leasehold transactions there may be further disbursements such as charges made by the Landlord and/or Management Company, these charges are usually reserved in the Lease for giving notice of Transfer, notice of Mortgage or dealing with Deed of Covenant or removal or compliance with a restriction. These fees cannot be ascertained until we have had the opportunity of perusing the Lease or receiving confirmation from the managing agents or freeholder.

How long will the transaction take?

How long a transaction will take will depend on a number of factors, many out of our control. However, the average process takes between 8-12 weeks.

Factors that can affect how long a transaction can take are whether there is a chain or you are selling or buying a leasehold property that requires an extension of the lease. There are of course many others factor that can impact transaction times and which cannot always be anticipated beforehand.

Key stages of the transaction

The conveyancing “process” effectively starts from when you decide to sell or buy your home to when you hand over or receive the keys to the property. Understanding the conveyancing process will help you to manage your expectations and ensure nothing is missed. The precise stages involved in a residential property transaction can vary according to the circumstances. However, below we have noted some of the key stages common to all transaction:

- Taking instructions and giving initial advice
- Carrying out Searches and advising on Search results
- Raising enquiries
- Receiving and advising on Contract documentation and reporting to you on Title
- Advising on Mortgage Conditions
- Preparation of Transfer and other key documents
- Exchanging Contracts and agreeing Completion date
- Completing your purchase or sale
- Redeeming Mortgage on your behalf if applicable on a sale
- Dealing with the Land Registry application for registration on a purchase

Miscellaneous

On occasion, additional matters may be required in conveyancing transactions such as drafting a statutory declarations as to rights not recorded in deeds and arranging Indemnity Insurance to cover defects. If these are required there may be an additional fees payable. However, we will always advise you of this prior to any fees being incurred and obtain your agreement to the same.
